Dead of Two Wars Remembered At Legion Services

The Armistice Service of Remembrance was held in the Legion Hall here at 3 p.m. last Sunday afternoon.

There was a very good attendance at this service. The Rev. Flagler of St. Thomas Anglican church, Wainwright, was the guest speaker and took as a topic for his address this quotation from the words of Sir James Barrie, "God has given us memory that we might have roses in December."

The roll of honor was read by Cde. A. D. Glasgow and the memorial wreath presented by Cdes. Wm. Dunbar and W. Parsons. Hugh Inglis sounded the Last Post. The United Church choir was in attendance and gave two very fine numbers entitled "Comrades of Christ and There is a God in Heaven."

A collection was taken in aid of T.B. vets.

The order of service was followed as printed on the Legion leaflets and closed with God Save The Queen.

Weekly Inspirational Corner

(Sponsored by an Irma Times reader)

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made.

In Him was life; and the life was the light of men.

He was in the world, and the world was made by Him, and the world knew Him not.

He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name.

HELLO HOMEMAKERS

This week I thought I'd give you a few housecleaning hints. It won't be too long before the Christmas season and we all want our homes spic and span for the festivities.

What do you think is the easiest way to house clean? Room by room, all at once or bit and miss. Here are my suggestions for more efficient house cleaning.

Make a Plan—Even if it's not on paper you'll follow it more closely if it's a plan is a must. Decide which rooms stay clean the longest, clean them thoroughly first. If you plan to do your cleaning on days which don't involve washing, ironing, etc., it won't seem such a big job. Clean one room, or two each week. Clean kitchen and dining area last.

Now you have them clean, let's keep them that way.

A Weekly Schedule—You've always said you'd like to organize your housework. Well, now's the time to do it. Here's a tentative schedule I'd like to offer you.

Monday — wash, mop floors with dust mop.

Tuesday — dust downstairs thoroughly, iron clothes.

Wednesday — wash and wax kitchen and bathroom floors.

Thursday — dust upstairs thoroughly—wax any other floors which require it.

Friday — weekly baking.

Saturday — dust upstairs and downstairs.

This schedule is worked in with all other jobs and may seem outrageous. Once it becomes routine, however, you'll find it easy. Even with Dad and the children coming up with unexpected activities a guide such as this helps get all the work done.

The floor waxing need be done only every two weeks for the kitchen. On the alternate weeks the floor should be polished with your polisher. Other floors which receive less traffic need be done less often.

Now for a few tips:

Washing Walls — Wash the walls from the bottom up. Dirty water running down into a clean area can be wiped off easily. Water running down into a dirty area leaves a streak.

If you have a vacuum cleaner with a wax spray attachment, try spraying a thin coat of self polishing floor wax over your freshly washed walls. It serves the same protective purpose as it does on your floors.

HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

The October meeting of the HSA was held in the school on October 15 with a good attendance of ladies.

After the business meeting at which Vitamin pills were distributed to those who had ordered them, Mrs. W. N. Symington led a discussion on Parent Education which proved so interesting it was decided to continue with it at the next meeting on November 19 at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Coffin who attended the "Work Shop" at Banff will also report. All parents and interested folk are urged to attend.

4H Wheat Club Achievement Day

Irma 4H Wheat Club held their Achievement Day on Wednesday, November 7 at the Legion Hall.

13 samples were submitted from a membership of 19, the other 6 members' plots were completely halted out.

The samples were judged by Mr. D. Steilfox, District Supervisor of 4H Clubs. He praised the members for the type of samples submitted. They showed that time and care had been given preparing them.

Mr. S. Duncan, our district agriculturist, conducted a grain judging competition among the members, and competition for identifying weed seeds. The members also filled out a "true or false" questionnaire.

Irma Board of Trade sponsored a banquet for the 4H Wheat Club members at 6 p.m.

Royal Purple ladies did the catering and served a very delicious meal. A good number of parents were present at the banquet. Speakers were Mr. R. W. Thurston on behalf of Irma Bd. of Trade, Mr. J. E. Ballentine, congratulating the ladies of the Royal Purple on the wonderful meal. Mr. Jas. Jackson, Wheat Pool delegate, spoke on behalf of Alberta Wheat Pool, and presented Jimmy Allen with a prize for having the best plot. Mr. Steilfox spoke on the importance of the 4H Club movement.

Mr. Ole Nissen gave a short summary of the year's activities and presented the prizes. Keith Currie, as President of the Club, handled the duties as Toastmaster very well and called for a vote of thanks to the Irma Board of Trade for sponsoring the banquet.

After the banquet Mr. Steilfox endeavored himself with his audience by showing a series of colored slides taken last winter when he and his wife lived among the Indians in Northern B.C., close to Alaska, where he taught school and Mrs. Steilfox acted as district nurse. Along with the slides he gave an account of his stay with the Indians, that was real interesting and heartwarming.

Northern Nuggets

Mr. and Mrs. L. Larson left last Friday to spend a few days with friends at Innisfail.

Mr. Ronnie Prior has accepted employment with the NWU at Wetaskiwin.

Miss Hazel Herder has arrived to spend the holiday with her family. When she returns to Vancouver her mother hopes to accompany her and spend the winter there.

Mrs. G. Coulman and Mrs. P. Prosser and Robin were recent Edmonton visitors.

Congratulations to our Albert boys who won awards at the 4H Wheat Club Achievement Day.

A small red plane flying low over the countryside on Monday turned a lot of excitement and curiosity. Finally it landed on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Haun. The occupant of the plane proved to be none other than Mr. Stan Reynolds of Wetaskiwin, who bought a 1915 3-wheel Case tractor to add to his well known collection of antiques.

Cattle Care

If it hasn't already been done, the calves should be weaned and put on feed now. This gives the cows a chance to pick up a little before winter sets in too hard. Once the calves have started to eat well any that were missed should be dehorned and vaccinated if it needs doing. Heifer calves should be Bangs vaccinated.

At this time of year the breeding herd should be culled and replacements selected. Cows which are not producing good calves or which are getting too old should be given a bit of feed and turned out. There is no point in keeping animals which are not producing a profit for you.

Welding School

Later on this winter there is going to be a welding school somewhere in my district. The location is not definite yet but it will be held as close as possible to the centre where the most interest is shown. The number who can attend such a school is limited because of the equipment involved. Anyone interested in such a school (one week in length) should let me know.

Farm Radio Forum

Many districts have formed these groups who get together to discuss problems and current interest topics after listening to a preliminary discussion on the radio. These groups feel that they get a great deal of information and help in this way. If you are interested in forming such a group, write to J. R. McFall, Alberta Federation of Agriculture, 507 McLeod Building, Edmonton, for full information.

Detours around Suez

Without minimizing the seriousness of the Suez crisis, it should be recorded that two economic factors are playing against Egypt. And these when seriously examined in Cairo could make President Nasser considerably more co-operative. One is the steady expansion of the large-tanker fleet that makes a detour of the Suez Canal economically feasible; the other is the onrush of the atomic era that is sure to bring before too many years economic electrical power from atomic energy. Both of these factors could in the matter of five or 10 years make Egypt's canal much less vital to British and Western European economy. Egyptian intransigence could result in Colonel Nasser's finding he had a canal that the world no longer really needed.

That is not to say that it does not need it now; that a breakdown in its operation would not be calamitous to Britain and the West; that Mideast oil flowing through the Canal to Western Europe is not presently vital and valuable. Nor is it to say that the signatories to the 1888 convention do not still have rights under that international agreement. But it is to point out and point up that while Colonel Nasser appears to hold the upper hand now, that will not always be so.

The large-tanker fleet is no day-dream. It is already coming into existence. The tankers that ply the Suez Canal average 15,000 to 25,000 tons. The Sinclair Oil Company is using a new 58,000-ton tanker to carry oil around the Cape of Good Hope. There are several other tankers in this category in operation; and others of 40,000-ton size or so. And recently an order was placed here in the United States for a 65,000-ton tanker—the largest ever ordered in this country. So the big-tanker fleet is growing and being found financially sound whatever happens to the Suez Canal. Such tankers will of course be more valuable in their runs from the Mideast oil fields around the Cape to the United States. But they could still be used to haul oil to Britain and Western Europe in an emergency — and were there enough of them. So the big tanker constitutes a potential answer to Colonel Nasser's current economic threat to Britain. It is one that with each passing month weakens his apparent stranglehold on access to Mideast oil.

The other factor that is playing against Colonel Nasser, the potentialities of which are immense, is the peaceful development of atomic power. Atomic Energy Commissioner Willard Libby recently said that atomic power may have come 25 years too early for the United States—because, as he explained, the United States at present has sufficient coal and petroleum reserves and it does not really need this new source of energy for its industrial empire now. In other words it is not currently hard up for sources of energy and not under pressure of need to develop atomic power quickly.

But that does not apply to Britain and some other countries. And the Suez crisis put dramatizes Britain's desperate need to develop this new source of energy. Actually Britain has instituted something of a crash program to tap this new source of energy. And in this field of applied atomic power the consensus is that the British are ahead of the United States. In a matter of weeks Britain is dedicating its first dual-purpose reactor—that is, a reactor that produces both plutonium and electric power. What makes that better than anything so far built either here or in Britain—or in the Soviet Union, it is presumed—is that it will not only develop electric power, but it will produce an element that is itself fissionable and a potential source of more atomic power.

The purpose in stating these facts, however, is not to go into the various types of atomic power plants that are being designed or dreamed about. It is rather to point up the fact that atomic power for industrial use is not still around the corner but is here and in use. Economic electric power from atomic energy for Britain is its real answer to its power crisis. And by freeing it from dependence on Mideast oil for energy it cannot but in time down-grade the importance to Britain of the Suez. This, and the increase in the large-tanker fleet of the West, should give Colonel Nasser pause in his present dealings with the West. He may have the economic upper hand now, but he will lose it quicker and have less left of value if he is not reasonable now.

All-Canadian radar

Not only one but both northern radar warning lines may be manned entirely by Canadians, officials said. It had been planned from the start that the 500 technicians required to operate and maintain the Mid-Canada Line would all be Canadians. The $170,000,000 Mid-Canada fence along the 55th parallel is being built and financed by Canada.

But it had been assumed that not enough Canadian technicians could be found to perform more than 80 percent of the manning job on the $500,000,000 DEW (Distant Early Warning) radar line in the Canadian Arctic. The line is being built and financed by the United States.

Officials said, however, that so many Canadian civilians have applied for radar and other jobs on the DEW line that American technicians may not be required at all, except for a few supervisors. DEW line operation and maintenance also will require 500 men.

The contract for operating the DEW line is held by Federal Electric Company of New Jersey. Nearly 600 Canadian civilians have met the minimum requirements so far but some have been weeded out in technical and medical tests.

So far Federal Electric has recruited only in the Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto areas but soon will move into western Canada to test applicants there.

Most of the men needed are radar technicians. They are to be paid $800 a month and must sign on for 18 months in the north. Diesel mechanics and clerks are also needed.

Enough men have already been recruited to fill training classes until early next year.

Rash statement

Any rash appearing on the skin, especially in the case of children, should have a doctor's attention. While the rash may be due to some simple cause, it could be a symptom of one of the contagious diseases which often start that way, or an allergy. In any case, early diagnosis by the doctor will help and in case of infection, prompt medical action will help to protect the rest of the family.

A SUNDAY LETTER

The faith and the municipal election

—By ROBERT MOON

The marking of a ballot in an election—be it federal, provincial or, as it will be next week, municipal—is to me a deeply religious act.

I know that such a belief may be met with scorn and perhaps even greeted as sacrilege. I realize that there is much in an election which scarcely measures up to the standard of Divine injunction, is contrary to the 10 Commandments, and is far, far away from the Sermon on the Mount. I know that in politics there is sometimes sin, and not very original sin.

Yet, I will take my stand on the side of the ballot as a profoundly Christian institution.

I know there have been historic instances in which the will of the people has been wrong. It was, indeed, the people and not Pilate who cried "Crucify Him." It was indeed, the people and not the high priest who called for the stoning of Stephen.

Yet, in the end, it was the people, the ordinary people of humble station and humble pretension, who reversed the stand of their brothers and accepted the Man who was crucified and the doctrine for which Stephen was stoned.

In the end, I maintain the people are right, however painful or wrong the steps by which they arrive at their ultimate triumphal decision.

The ballot, of course, is but the symbol of what we inspirationally call democracy. It is a symbol of our government and of our time, though it does not always ask, as we will be asked, what kind of time we prefer.

It is in perfect a method as we have yet devised to determine the mass will of the people, who are always eventually right. It is as close as we have yet come to rendering equality and the brotherhood of man into Caesar.

The Kingdom of God on earth, I believe, will not be attained by the Divine right of kings, but by the Divine right of a spiritual King.

What single human being, I ask, can presume to know, without qualification, limitation, or recourse to God or man, how to apply exactly the conditions for the Kingdom of God on earth?

So, I think we owe a debt to the Greeks, who tried democracy — and though they built their society on a slave base — found it not wanting.

I think we owe a debt to the Romans, who gave us a system for legal principle.

I think we owe a debt to the Man on the cross lived on and the Mosaic law lived on, and the revolution of the Sermon on the Mount lived on.

And I believe that if we had had no Greeks or no Romans we would still have built our democracy, for if we had had Christianity and if we accepted the brotherhood of man it preached and its concept of the imperfect individual, we would not in the end have set up an authoritarian state.

We would have chosen the ballot and in marking it, we would have begun putting Christianity into action.

So, if we search the vulgar election debates we are now hearing—vulgar in the best sense of the word, the archaic Latin sense of the word, the common people—we will find some truth, some collective expression of wisdom.

If not this year then it will come next year or the year after that, greater than the single words of a single man, somewhere near what the people want and the people need.

Can their yearning come a human assembly to mouth their wants and needs and to work for and create the conditions they need for happiness.

It can never give them happiness for themselves. They must find it themselves.

—Leader-Post, Oct. 27, 1956.

Shortage of many kinds of workers

Employment in Canada remained at a record level in September with a general shortage of many kinds of workers continuing unrelieved, the government said recently.

A joint monthly statement by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the Labor Department said manpower supplies tightened moderately in the month as the seasonal withdrawal of students and other short-term workers slightly exceeded the post-summer decline in labor requirements.

The number of persons with jobs was estimated at 5,676,000, a decline of 147,000 from the previous month's record of 5,823,000. The declines totalled 105,000 in agriculture and 42,000 in non-farm industry.

The statement said the number of persons without jobs and seeking work and the number registered for employment at National Employment offices eased moderately during the month.

New light on the old schoolhouse

Most new schools are modern in design and facilities but there are still many of the old type of school which has poor lighting, with resultant damage to the pupils' eyesight. In rooms that are too dark, a light color on paint and ceiling will help to reflect light on desks and blackboards. Care should be taken that glare from shiny surfaces is eliminated.

LOVIG — NESDOLY

Miss Marian Lillian Lovig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Lovig of Irma, became the bride of Mr. Victor Ronald Nesdoly, son of Mr. Paul Nesdoly and the late Mrs. Nesdoly of Cando, Sask., at a ceremony performed by the Rev. H. W. Inglis in the Irma United Church on November 7.

The church was tastefully decorated with bouquets of mixed fall flowers and pink ribbons marked the pews of relatives and invited guests.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked beautiful in a floor length gown of white brocade satin with net and seed pearl trim topped by a long sleeved bolero. Her matching chapel veil was held in place by a coronet of sequins. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses tied with white satin ribbon.

The bride's cousin, Miss Evelyn Fuder, was maid of honor. Miss Verle Prior and Miss Joan Fleming were bridesmaids. The trio wore similarly styled strapless, cocktail length gowns of lace and net over taffeta with matching boleros in pink, blue and navy green respectively. Each wore a matching headdress and carried nosegays of blue, pink and yellow mums and white carnations.

For the double ring ceremony, Linda and Clare, sister and brother of the bride, carried the rings on white cushions on which also rested a sprig of pink roses. Linda wore a pink embroidered nylon frock while Clare was dressed in grey flannels and navy blazer.

Attending the groom were Mr. Mervin and Ronald Lovig, brothers of the bride, and Mr. Paul Nesdoly, brother of the groom. Acting as ushers were Gordon and Arthur Lovig, also brothers of the bride.

Mrs. Helen Whidden played the wedding music and Mrs. Robt. Simmermon sang "I'll Walk Beside You" during the signing of the register.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Lovig chose an afternoon dress of navy blue with black accessories. Her corsage was of pink carnations.

Mrs. Nesdoly, step-mother of the groom, wore a light grey suit with pale blue accessories. Her corsage was red carnations.

At a reception for some 120 relatives and friends, the bride's table was laid with linen and centred with a four tiered wedding cake flanked by tall white tapers. Mr. Donald Gunn proposed a toast to the bride. The groom, in a few fitting words, responded to the toast.

At this time Rev. Inglis proposed a toast to the bride's parents on the occasion of their silver anniversary. Mr. Earl Fuder in a few well chosen words presented Mr. and Mrs. Lovig with a chest of 1847 Rogers Bros. silverware from the Fuder and Lovig families. Placed before the bride and groom of twenty-five years was a two-tiered anniversary cake.

Immediately following the supper in the church reception hall, open house was held until ten at the home of the bride's parents. A dance followed at the North Irma Community Hall until 2:30 a.m. with Hurst's orchestra providing the music.

For going away the bride donned a charcoal dress with pink accessories.

Vic and Marian will make their home in Edmonton for the present.

Out-of-town guests included relatives from Wetaskiwin, Edmonton, Holden, Red Deer, Jarrow, Wainwright and Cando, Sask.

BOVENCAMP — RICHARDSON

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in Sedgewick United church on Saturday, Nov. 3, when Wilman Eileen Bovencamp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bovencamp of Jarrow and Kenneth Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richardson of Vancouver, were united in marriage by Rev. Strapp.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white embroidered net, styled with a tiered skirt over crinoline and strapless bodice, modified by a bolero with lily-point sleeves. Her chapel veil was caught to a pill-box embroidered with sequins and seed pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of pink sweetheart roses. Her only jewellery were pearl earrings.

Mrs. Ole Lunde and Viola

Bovencamp were her sister's attendants. They chose floor-length gowns of mauve sheer and net, and yellow nylon and net respectively. Each wore a bandeau of flowers in their hair and carried a nosegay of mums.

The flower girl, little Lenora Owen, wore a green nylon sheer floor-length dress. She carried a basket of flowers and wore a bandeau of flowers in her hair.

Mr. Russ Worawa, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man and ushering the guests was Frances Bovencamp, the bride's brother.

Mrs. Strapp played the wedding music.

Later, a reception was held at the bride's parents home where Mr. Ole Christensen proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling the bride changed to a white fitted suit with matching accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson will reside in Vancouver.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Russ Worawa and small son of Drayton Valley, Mr. and Mrs. Kelly of Camrose, Mrs. Davies and Mr. Charles Eissen of Edmonton.

Opportunities In Home Economics

Opportunities for young women are boundless in the field of home economics, according to Miss Helen McKercher, Director Home Economics Service of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

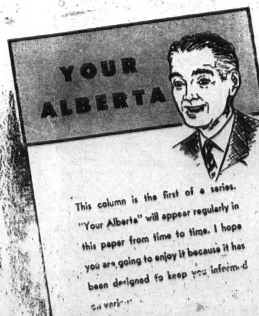

"There are so many fields open to the graduate in home economics," Miss McKercher told the girl delegates to the 25th annual National 4-H Club Week in Toronto today, "That no young women should lack for an interesting future. Whether you want to be a dietitian, a research worker or a teacher . . . whether you feel that press, radio or television offers you a future or whether you want to be a homemaker, a course in home economics is a sound basis. The demand for qualified graduates far exceeds the supply at the present time and as our country grows so will that demand."

Miss McKercher hoped that the groundwork laid in 4-H Club activities would inspire many young Canadian girls to follow the field of home economics. The opportunities for success for the individual were limitless and the training gained would benefit not only the individual but the nation.

Manitoba tries reason

(From "The Leader", St. James, Man.—October 11, 1956)

An article by the well-known newspaperman, Michael Best, in the September 11th edition of the Toronto Globe and Mail, appearing as an editorial page feature, sums up under this simple heading the interest that is being shown in Manitoba's attempt at alcohol education. In view of the pending local option vote to be taken in St. James, Charleswood and Assiniboia on October 24th the article is of timely interest and has reference to the recently established Manitoba Committee on Alcohol Education, and the first of the series of advertisements sponsored by the Committee which appeared in this paper simultaneously with all other Manitoba newspapers.

The article follows, in part:

To readers, the advertisement put this question: "What is best for (your) community under Manitoba's new liquor law?" This advertisement did not presume to answer the question for the people of the Province but suggested some things they should think about before answering it themselves.

Example: What law enforcement problems would arise if new liquor outlets were opened in the reader's own community? What would be the social and moral implications of any changes in the community's drinking pattern? What would be the effect on young people? The message also asked Manitobans to consider the economic implications of additional liquor outlets in their communities.

At present the only public drinking in the Province is beer in parlors for men only. But under the new Liquor Act, cocktail bars, beverage rooms, cabarets and licensed restaurants and dining rooms are permitted. The educational program in its first stage will be designed to aid people of the Province to vote intelligently on the outlets. The approach will be the same as in the first message—suggestions rather than instruction. After the votes are held, the program will switch to general alcohol education.

Core of the Bracken recommendations was the Commission's belief that social evils of drinking could not be removed—and might even be increased—by a highly restrictive law such as Manitoba had. Its answer was legislation in harmony with the liquor "folkways" of the people, side by side with an education program to promote high standards of liquor responsibility. This is the role of the program now under way.

The program is directed primarily at adults, and secondly at the community. The starting point of the committee was summed up by one member as follows: "Although we recognize that abstinence is a practical solution to drinking, we are aware that many people are going to drink. They should be made aware of the problems that drinking brings to themselves and to society."

The committee's approach will not be that of the ranting temperance crusader. Instead the program will suggest some patterns of drinking, and rely on their reasonableness to win them broad public acceptance. The committee is aware that the other approach would bring public contempt for the program instead of the respect it needs to succeed.

To start with there will be one or two advertisements a week in the daily papers of the Province. Weekly and monthly publications will carry messages from the committee in each issue. Radio spot announcements will be broadcast about three times a week each station.

The program—being a pioneer effort—is attracting considerable attention outside Manitoba, in other Provinces and in the U.S. But it will probably be a year or two before a reliable estimate can be made of its effectiveness.

The game of golf

(From The Globe, Lacombe, Alta.—August 9, 1956)

The chase of a little while sphere called a golf ball around a mile or so of cut grass called a fairway is known as sport.

Why do grown adults enjoy swing a club lustily at a small ball and chasing after it just for the pleasure of taking another "whack"? We suppose it's like asking why men with mature minds, go thrashing through underbrush and past colonies of mosquitoes in order to throw a fishing line into a quiet mountain stream. There's some mystifying satisfaction in the effort, even if there are no trout, just like there is satisfaction in completing 18 holes of golf because of one good shot that is made.

The golfer seems happy walking miles farther than he'd ever think of walking in the course of an ordinary day's work. If he dufts a drive, it's only natural human error. If he misses a short putt, he is learning to control his temper.

A few golfers are automatons, with a grooved swing achieved from long practice. These robots (the lucky stiffs) play par golf or better. Then there are a few wild flubbers who should forsake golf clubs for yo-yos. They break lots of branches off trees but never one hundred.

Somewhere between these two extremes lie the majority of golfers, who think they're twice as good as they really are. They're forever trying, forever hoping, and forever boasting.

Impressive showing

(From The Red River Valley Echo, Altona, Man.—October 24, 1956)

Congratulations go out this week to six Valley towns, villages and municipalities who have been named among the winners in the Good Roads and Beautification Competition held each year by the Manitoba Good Roads Association.

The rural municipalities of Stanley and Montcalm each won second prizes; the rural municipality of Rhineland received honorable mention; the village of Altona was named best village and the towns of Morris and Morden each won trophies in the best towns section.

This is the best record ever chalked up by Valley municipalities. Last year Rhineland, Stanley, Altona and Emerson were in the winners' circle.

Full credit for the wins must go to the councils and the residents of the municipalities concerned. Stanley and Montcalm won on the basis of well kept roads, while Rhineland received honorable mention (Rhineland had won this trophy two years ago and therefore did not receive the trophy although qualified to do so) for most improved municipal roads. Altona, Morris and Morden were judged best looking villages and towns in different classes of the competition.

The councils of the municipalities concerned have certainly done their part towards winning these honors, especially in the rural competitions. The councils decide what work is to be done on roads. The excellence of the work done must be credited also to the operators of patrols and other road maintenance machines.

In the towns and villages too, councils have had the condition of the streets kept up, had weeds cleared away and needed walks built.

In the towns there is also much credit due the individual home owners. Judging of towns is largely on appearance of home grounds and businesses. In past years there has been an increasing interest shown in the beautification of homes, yards and business places. Pride of ownership has been responsible for most of these improvements no doubt, but chamber of commerce must also take some of the credit.

In Altona the annual beautification drives have paid off well. For a village that has doubled its size in the past decade there are innumerable headaches in assuring orderly development. Altona council has given this problem special attention in recent years. The newly adopted town planning scheme is an example of the village council's effort. The adoption of a garbage collection system which is expected to go into operation this fall, also speaks well for council's desire to improve the village.

Serving the community and your neighbor

(From The Journal, Melfort, Sask.—October 18, 1956)

Politics at the municipal level is far from being organized in the same manner that attached to elections for legislature or federal seats.

But should this lack of organization also include a lack of eagerness on the part of able and capable men from offering to serve their community and neighbors, with their initiative, energy and vision.

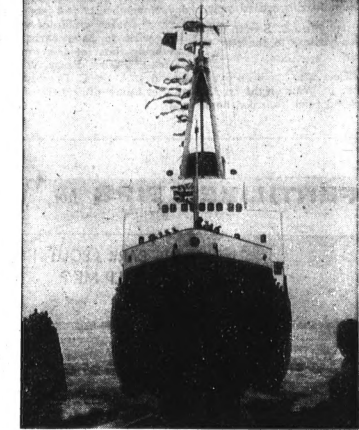

Should municipal elections, particularly in Melfort, be generally a form of press-gang tactics, wherein reluctant candidates are forced to sign nomination papers at the last minute, or the seat goes vacant.

What is there about municipal elections which brings to light a modesty, many times not noticed before, in men and women, making them, unwilling to step forward and announce their intentions of candidature, and declare themselves openly, ready and willing to take over the job of mayor, councillor or school trustee? Such a declaration should be a matter of pride and an indication of personal integrity and resolve.

Men who are successful in business, will leave no lead unturned to continue their success, but in matters of municipal election, become meek and self-effacing.

And it's about time this attitude changed. We want strong aggressive men to carry the burden and prompt the progress of our community life. We want men who believe in their convictions and are willing to stand behind them until they can be convincingly shown different. We want men who are proud of the trust placed in them by the electors, and who are not afraid to voice that pride.

If success in business is an indication that we have capable men in Melfort to handle our municipal administrative positions, then we have lots of them. What we need lack is that some force directed towards signing candidates papers. Though nomination day is on Monday, it is not too late to make known a wish to serve your town and your neighbor, by standing for election.

FARM OUTPUT RISES BUT INCOME DROPS

World farm production is up three percent over last year, but prices are down and so is farm income, the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization reports.

United States farm prices, it said, fell 10 percent.

The FAO said the consumer is in the middle—benefiting little.

Its annual report on the state of food and agriculture, issued by the FAO's headquarters in Rome, said that in the United States, for example, the marketing margin for retail food sales increased three percent in the first quarter of 1956, against the first quarter of 1955.

The marketing margin is the spread between what the farmer gets and the consumer pays.

The FAO, formed 11 years ago to improve the world food situation, summed up the problems of world agriculture this way:

"The basic dilemma of most governments is how to reconcile their dual responsibilities to maintain the economic position of farmers and at the same time to provide consumers with adequate food supplies at low prices."

"In spite of the added urgency caused by surplus stocks, only a beginning has so far been made toward reducing production and marketing costs in order to bring more and better food within the reach of the poorer consumer."

The FAO said "the deteriorating position of the farm population continues to cause anxiety," adding:

"Prices have continued to move against the farmer in most countries, although in Europe prices of livestock products have been maintained."

"The prices of important farm requisites (what the farmer buys) have risen in nearly all countries."

"Farm incomes appeared generally to have declined between 1954 and 1955 or, at best, to have made only very limited gains in sharp contrast to the rising trend of incomes in other occupations."

The report made these other points:

1. Largest production increases in 1955-56 were in North America, Australia and New Zealand—the areas already most troubled by surpluses.

2. A feature of agricultural trade last year was large imports of grains and sugar by the Soviet Union and Eastern European countries.

3. Although world trade in farm products was up five percent in 1955, the volume of this trade was still only five percent above the prewar 1934-38 level, in contrast to a rise of 70 percent in world trade as a whole. This was attributed to a tendency toward self-sufficiency in industrialized countries.

4. There is little likelihood of any significant reductions in surplus stocks during 1956-57.

Nuclear warfare

Infantry troops will have to be prepared to move more quickly in nuclear warfare, Brig. A. E. Winch, commander of the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade, said recently.

Brig. Winch was in Victoria to visit the 2nd battalion Queen's Own Rifles and the 4th light anti-aircraft battery and to make preliminary plans for next summer's exercises at Camp Wainwright, Alberta.

The officer said the army is studying the "impact of nuclear weapons on our tactics and organization."

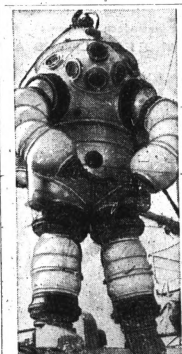

"The big thing is that now we are going to have to be better trained and better able to move and look he said.

Junior leaders will have to be first class and be prepared to take greater responsibility he said. "Things are going to move more quickly."

Home market is the best one

(From The Bulletin, Brooks, Alta.—August 26, 1936)

When there is full employment of labor at good wages, the families of the employed people like to eat plenty of meat. Booming times in Canada have resulted in Canadian people becoming big meat eaters. The farmers and ranchers have been kept busy producing enough meat to satisfy the national appetite.

The average per capita meat consumption in Canada last year was 151½ lbs. Beef was in best demand, contributing 72 pounds to the total and pork 58 pounds.

As a considerable proportion of Canada's 16,000,000 people did not eat 151½ lbs. of meat per person last year, quite a few must have eaten up to 200 lbs. per person.

In 1930 Canada exported 263,000,000 lbs. of beef to the United States. In 1935, five years later, the figure was only 18,000,000 lbs. Furthermore, cattle marketings increased in Canada by 350,000 head in that five year period.

Pork exports to the United States last year totalled only 10 percent of marketings, which increased 16 percent over the previous year. That increase was consumed in Canada.

The fact remains that the best market available to producers of meat, dairy and poultry products is the domestic market. Increasing population and the continuation of good times will keep busy the producers of such products.

Disaster

(From The Empire-Advance, Virden, Man.—August 22, 1936)

Last Thursday was a black day for hundreds of farmers in Western Manitoba, for that afternoon disaster struck. Beautiful crops which promised to be among the best this part of the country had ever seen and which were almost ready for harvest were, in a few minutes reduced to straw and chaff by the most devastating hail and wind storm this area had experienced in generations.

Some farmers had hail insurance, many had none. Some farmers will be able to save a little grain for feed; many will save nothing.

All of the farmers in the disaster area had the heart-breaking experience of seeing their season's work and the promise of bountiful harvest beaten into the ground.

The only bright spot in the dark picture is that a few farms have also another crop which hail could not damage—black gold.

Somewhere when disasters of this nature happen in a wide area of rich farmland the need for some form of mutual help, some sort of crop insurance on a co-operative basis and covering all farmers becomes apparent. Here is something on which farm organizations might well work together.

Hailed out farm folk have the sympathy of everyone in the community.

We're grateful to our town

(From The Clarion, Kindersley, Sask.—October 4, 1936)

In the painful weeks since the onset of the editor's last illness, we have learned much about the meaning of life in a small town. It has been a comforting and an inspiring experience to feel a whole community rallying round with help and encouragement and sympathy. We have learned the miracle of courage and strength renewed by a friendly handclasp, offered in silence but more eloquent than any oratory in its message of sympathy and reassurance.

The painful memories of these tormented days are brightened by a hundred faces, in pleasant focus against a hazy background of Main Street—faces of folk who stood in the midst of their daily round to ask about the progress of their editor, to assure us that their hopes and prayers were with him or to explain (after the sad news of his passing was known) how deeply they shared in our loss.

We of his immediate family find words most inadequate to express our gratitude for the hundreds of little acts of kindness and expressions of friendship which have been showered upon us by the people of "our town".

On granting licenses

(From The Swift Current Sun, Swift Current, Sask.—Aug. 11, 1936)

It was brought out at council meeting last Monday when several new licenses to conduct business were issued, that the city fathers in doing so have no regulatory authority. They collect the fee and the business operates. Some aldermen, in the discussion, indicated there had been complaints of painting outfits coming into the city charging exorbitant prices, and further complaints about jobs not being satisfactorily—sort of fly-by-night stuff. The city solicitor gave them the law on it. The council can, however, authorize or reject the license. Here, maybe is where the public might get some protection, maybe by a scrutiny through official sources of the nature and character of the business associates. The public, of course, seems to have no comeback in things of this sort.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

THE PRICE OF GREATNESS

The price of greatness is responsibility.—Winston Churchill

Only those men and women gain greatness who gain themselves in a complete subordination of self.

—Mary Baker Eddy

Behold the turtle, he makes progress only when he sticks his neck out.

—James Bryant Conant

Responsibility's like a string we can only see the middle of. Both ends are out of sight.

—William A. F. Foe

A thing of beauty is a joy forever...

(From The Canadian, Camrose, Alta.—August 22, 1936)

Having lived-on the prairies for nearly 50 years, we sometimes get impatient with people who travel through and belittle and bemoan the lack of scenery on the prairies. True, we don't have the majestic mountain peaks and the mirrored lakes, but we do have expansive vistas of unrestricted vision, with the majesty of sunrise in the early morning, the globe of fire slowly rising and warming the atmosphere; and then in the evenings we do have nature for the artist and the whole sky as a canvas, where colors that would have delighted the hearts of the great artists of recorded history. All this is free. Then in the harvest season we have the miles and miles of waving wheat-fields... what could be more beautiful? These bucolic inspirations are what caught the fancy of the American people and made famous such plays as "Oklahoma" and "State Fair". We truly like the mountains, and we can go to them for our inspiration, for like the Psalmist we too "lift up our eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh our aid". At the same time we have learned to appreciate the grandeur of the prairies. Here around Camrose we have the trees to break the monotony, and since man has taken over from nature in the few, the vista has improved. No longer do raging fires stunt the growth of the trees and blacken the sod. There actually is a surplus of tree growth here now. Now, when the standing grain is turning to gold in color, take a drive through the country and see if nature has not endowed the flat lands of the prairie with a beauty all her own!

Wealthy Indian en route home to aid his village

A 72-year-old native of India is on his way home with $200,000 in his pocket and compassion in his heart.

For Harman Singh Hari the trip to Montreal from Calgary and his boarding of a plane for India, represented the fulfillment of a dream which began 45 years ago in Calgary.

At that time, he landed with his wife in the western city like out a living, something he was unable to do in his poverty-stricken native village.

Though he at first earned only 10 cents an hour, he later found prosperity in farming and brought property.

His wealth continued to grow until he owned more than 1,800 acres of land.

Explaining his reasons for selling 160 acres of the land, Mr. Hari said at Montreal Airport yesterday, "God has been good to me and I must help those who have not as much as I."

Speaking of what he plans to do with the $200,000 he received for the land, he said he will spend it entirely on the little village he left so many years ago.

"I will help the people of my family's village get what they need most," he said, "maybe a school, a library or an animal clinic. I will give money to the crippled children, to the blind and to the Red Cross."

The second stop on the elderly Indian's mission of mercy will be London. He will then go to Bombay, Delhi and finally the Punjab.

HOW CAN HE?

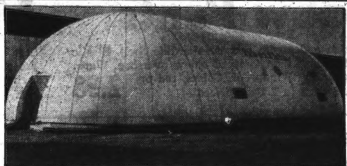

It took the combined efforts of agroscope manufacturer and the New York Museum of Natural History to solve a riddle millions of years old: How does a fly fly?

Motion pictures, obtained only by dint of much planning, reveal that a fly moves his wings up and down three hundred times a second in flight. Still unsolved, however, is the mystery of how he turns upside down and lights on the ceiling.

There are no penguins at the North Pole and no polar bears or fur-bearing animals of any kind at the South Pole.

TOKYO TOYLAND—It won't be too long before Santa makes his annual trip. The Tokyo youngsters above, find themselves in a children's paradise already, as they enjoy a wide variety of "Made in Japan" toys. The peak period has begun for the island nation's toy manufacturers, with 80 percent of the products going to the United States, Canada and some European countries.

AIRHOUSE WAREHOUSE—A new warehouse, large enough to hold two million pounds of packaged goods, is supported entirely by air. Eighty feet long, 40 feet wide and 20 feet high, the "Airhouse" is made of a paper-thin tough vinyl-coated nylon fabric. The structure weighs about 400 pounds, costs about $2,000 and can be erected by three men in one hour. It should prove a help in the warehousemen's need for low cost, low maintenance, flame-resistant, temporary warehousing.
